A DRAGON made out of plastic garbage bags briefly appeared Friday morning in front of the Fine Arts Building. John McCuiston's Art 123 class created the monster. The class plans to make an octopus out of such bags later this week.

Reid Buckley calls liberals 'radicals'

Conservative Reid Buckley last Friday night called liberals "radicals" whose philosophy encouraged violence.

He singled out the assassination of Sen. Robert Kennedy as an example, saying Kennedy was killed by a member of the left, not by a conservative.

Buckley, younger brother of William F. Buckley, participated in a debate with four University of Montana faculty members in the University Center Ballroom. The topic was "Does Liberalism Doom Society?"

The four were John Lawry, philosophy professor; Meyer Chessin, botany professor; Howard Reinhardt, mathematics professor and chairman of his department, and Keith McDuffie, foreign language associate professor and chairman of his department. Roy Mahaffey, visiting professor of speech communication, served as moderator.

Buckley said three beliefs are held by conservatives—the protection of life, individual liberty and the right to property.

Buckley said liberals are too concerned with acquiring material goods and have forgotten or disregarded spiritual needs.

Lawry gave a brief history of liberalism and said, "It is the result of the struggle between liberty and authority."

Chessin said society is endangered by ecological mistreatment. The question of liberalism versus conservatism is immaterial, he said.

Reinhardt asked Buckley if a failure to set sulphur dioxide standards in Montana as a right of property would not violate the people's right to life.

Buckley answered that unquestionably the right to life has priority, but qualified his statement by saying there must be a balance between the two.

About 500 people attended the debate.

Douglas implies Berrigan's guilt

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP)—Government witness Boyd Douglas Jr. testified yesterday that the Rev. Philip Berrigan solicited him to smuggle letters out of the federal penitentiary where both were convicts in the spring of 1970.

"Philip Berrigan asked if there was any way I could get a message out or get a phone call to a friend; I said I thought I could get a letter out for him if that's what he wanted," Douglas said at the anti-war conspiracy trial of Berrigan and six others.

"We arranged to meet the next day in the mess hall and he'd give me a letter at that time," he said.

Because of this and subsequent letters allegedly smuggled out of the Lewisburg, Pa., penitentiary, the government claims Berrigan was able to plot with the codefendants the kidnapping of Presidential Aide Henry Kissinger and the destruction of government property as a protest against the Vietnam war.

written at the Montana Constitutional Convention.

The provision, which would give citizens the right to sue people or agencies polluting the environment, was defeated in committee. However, Tomlinson said, he believes voting on the provision will be close in the final floor vote.

John McBride, SERC researcher and graduate student in dental hygiene, is coordinating a study of Missoula Valley respiratory diseases. His work, begun 15 months ago, deals with climatology, meteorology and pollution levels in the Missoula area.

"It's a three-pronged effort," McBride said. "We've been studying the valley's climatology, trying to correlate particulate air pollution with meteorological conditions so that we can look at the weather and predict pollution levels." The third part of the study is "attempting to correlate particulate air pollution and meteorological conditions with respiratory diseases in the valley."

McBride said no reports have been published yet, although most of the climatological and meteorological studies have been completed.

"As we dig farther into the issue we find it keeps expanding," he said. SERC has asked the National Science Foundation for support in financing the project, but no funds have been received.

Chris Servheen, junior in wildlife technology and participant in SERC activities, said the center also is helping to finance a coyote behavior and food-habit study. He said SERC is working with the zoology department on the project by providing money for radio collars and monitoring equipment.

Servheen said another group of SERC researchers is compiling data on de facto wilderness areas. He said the group is working in conjunction with the Sierra Club in mapping and studying various areas that could be classified as wilderness regions in the future.

Berven lists CB powers

Central Board has unlimited power to decrease all funding for varsity athletics or to increase funding during the 1972-73 fiscal year, Leroy Berven, ASUM planning board chairman and junior in history-political science and chemistry, said yesterday.

Berven was referring to information contained in a letter he wrote to President Robert Pantzer last Sunday. He wrote it to "clarify any current controversy about the authority of ASUM Central Board to allocate student activity fees to varsity athletics."

The letter contained these points:

● In 1970 a policy approved by Pantzer stipulated that ASUM appropriations to varsity athletics "could not be increased more than 20 per cent or decreased more than 12 per cent from one year to the next." Representatives from ASUM and the Faculty Athletic Committee submitted the policy to Pantzer. The policy could be suspended by a two-thirds vote of at least 25 per cent of students paying activity fees.

● In a referendum vote April 20, 1971, 65 per cent of the students who voted wanted complete student control of ASUM appropriations over varsity athletics. About 30 per cent of the total student body voted.

● According to the current ASUM Constitution, "No referendum shall be binding upon Central Board for more than two years."

● Because of the referendum results, the 1970 policy is no longer valid as of April 20, 1971. It will be suspended until April 20, 1973.

Nationalists suspect U.S.-Sino decision

TAIPEI (AP) — Chiang Kai-shek's government declared yesterday it will consider null and void any public or secret agreement President Nixon may have made with the Chinese Communists affecting the rights and interests of Nationalist China.

The statement indicated the Nationalists suspect there may have been some Taiwan agreement in Peking last week that was not mentioned in a joint U.S.-Chinese communique Sunday in Shanghai.

President Nixon said yesterday in Washington, D.C., that no secret agreements had been entered into deciding the fate of any nation.

Nationalist China's statement focused chiefly on a section in the joint communique saying the United States acknowledges there is only one China and that this is something for Chinese themselves to settle. It said U.S. military forces on Taiwan would begin leaving gradually as tensions on the island diminish.

The statement on the outcome of Nixon's eight-day visit to China was a reiteration of past Nationalist positions. It is doubtful the government will act much further on the subject until it hears later in the week from Marshall Green, the U.S. assistant secretary of state, who accompanied Nixon to China and is now on a tour of some Asian nations to explain the outcome.

The Nationalists are particularly concerned that the United States may be leaving them open to takeover by the Communists on the mainland.

SERC research topics vary

By G. Karl Marcus
Montana Kaimin Reporter

Researchers for the Student Environmental Research Center (SERC) are conducting scientific research in fields ranging from environmental law to respiratory diseases in the Missoula Valley and are publishing a monthly newsletter, The Survivalist, which deals with current environmental issues in Montana.

SERC was formed last September by University of Montana students concerned about environmental issues. It is run exclusively by students and has no faculty advisors. The SERC office is in the Venture Center.

Bill Tomlinson, leader of the environmental legislation research group, has been working through the SERC office since September on issues related to environmental law in Montana.

"Our job is one of testimony and preparatory work on behalf of legislation," Tomlinson said. "As soon as we find out who the delegates to the next legislature will be, we will contact them to see which ones are interested in environmental law. Next we'll find out what laws they plan to propose and then we'll try to do back-up research for their legislation."

Tomlinson said the SERC office has served as a liaison between University environmentalists, city environmental groups and state-wide interest organizations.

"We've worked in close connection with GASP, Montana League of Conservation Voters, Sierra Club, Montana Wilderness Association and Montana Wildlife Federation," he said.

The environmental legislation group was active recently in attempting to establish a citizen-suit provision in the natural resources article being

Reinhardt champions female academics

To the Editor:

In the Montana Kaimin in the recent past, Vice President Richard Landini was quoted as saying, "Across the board, women's salaries in the academic community tend to be lower than men's. Most women hold two jobs, that of teacher and mother." I am persuaded that the quotation is incomplete — and the inference one might draw is unjustified.

One cannot quarrel with the first sentence; it does describe the unfortunate plight of female academics. The second sentence does not accurately reflect the situation on this campus. Only about one-third of our female academics have children they are caring for. (None, as far as I know, have children they don't care for.)

It is part of the conventional wisdom that women with children devote less time to academic matters than their male counterparts. I know of no statistical evidence that that is true. I urge the interested reader to engage in the following experiment: women faculty members should predict whether having children reflects on their qualifications as teachers and scholars. I think it will turn out to be guess-

As plausible as the conventional wisdom is the argument that a female academic with children actually works harder at teaching than others; for, in order to be willing to combine the roles of teacher and mother, she must have an especial dedication to scholarship.

In fact, the existence of children should be considered irrelevant. Women in academia are hired to do the same jobs as their male peers and should be judged on their performance in those jobs.

Law student pushes for MontPIRG support

To the Editor:

During Spring Quarter registration University of Montana students will be polled to support the Montana Public Interest Research Group (MontPIRG) by checking the "I support the MontPIRG" box. A card will be presented to the student at the time of registration, which will give the student a choice whether to request the Board of Regents to allow a $1 per quarter fee assessed at future registration times.

The fee will be charged optionally. The funds collected will go to the state MontPIRG and will be allocated to the resolution of statewide public interest issues chosen by the student representatives.

The poll is similar to the athletic poll taken last quarter. A check-off for support will not result in a fee assessment; it will only indicate student willingness to support this proposal when it goes before the Board of Regents for approval of the fund collection idea. Below is a resolution passed at the last Central Board meeting, asking President Robert Pantzer to allow our poll to be taken during registration.

"We, the Associated Students of the University of Montana, acting through the duly elected student representatives, this 16th day of February, 1972, do resolve:

(1) to endorse the principle of the Montana Public Interest Research Group;

(2) to allow the organizers of the Montana Public Interest Group to use this endorsement in promoting the local chapter and the state organization, to be known as the Montana Public Interest Research Group.

(3) to request and obtain permission from President Pantzer of the University of Montana to use the necessary administrative means to petition the University of Montana students, employing the registration process, similar to the athletic poll taken at winter registration, for acceptance and funding of the Montana Public Interest Research Group.

Sincerely,
John R. Christensen
(for Central Board)
ASUM president"

Class schedule books 'secret'

To the Editor:

Please, would someone explain to me why the class schedule books were hidden from the students like a stack of top secret papers?

All I wanted to do was plan out a schedule during the weekend, so Monday in the rush of registration there would be less chance of making mistakes and costing the University otherwise unnecessary paperwork.

Friday, I called the Registrar's Office and asked if I could pick up a schedule book. I was told they weren't printed yet!

Not ready to give up, I went to the Registrar's Office and again requested a schedule. Although the answer I received was unsatisfactory, it was at least honest: I could pick up a book with my packet on Monday.

Still not ready to submit, I sought out my English teacher and found in her an understanding person. She loaned me her schedule on the condition that I return it Monday. I and about 15 friends planned our classes, Lois Welch got her schedule back and what the Registrar's Office didn't know won't hurt them!

Many grateful thanks to Lois Welch for being understanding.

Policy on Letters to the Editor

Letters generally should be no longer than 400 words, preferably typed and triple spaced, with the writer's full name, class and major, address and phone number listed. They should be brought or mailed to the Montana Kaimin office in Room 206 of the Journalism Building.

The Kaimin reserves the right to edit all letters, but if changes are made which might change the author's meaning, he will be consulted before the changes are made.

Student contests Waltermire letter

To the Editor:

In his letter to the Montana Kaimin Feb. 23, Jim Waltermire asserts that there are benefits from varsity athletics in excess of those received by people viewing the games. But saying that they exist does not make them realities.

Could it be that the athletes themselves receive such benefits? That seems implausible, since they must be paid to play. Nor is there evidence that the teams are bringing forth additional legislative appropriations. Two undefeated football seasons were followed by our university's present budget crisis. Apparently Waltermire did not learn all that he might have in John Wicks' public finance course.

Waltermire should be further advised that Wicks is not a faculty adviser to Central Board, but rather a faculty representative, as provided by the ASUM constitution. It makes no more sense to accuse a faculty representative on Central Board of interfering in student affairs than it does to accuse our many student representatives on faculty committees of interfering in faculty affairs.

'We're paid to support the image'

Public relations and imagery for Info Services

By S. John Postorino
Montana Kaimin Reporter

The job of the University of Montana Information Services is to put out hard, perfunctory news, according to Larry Stuart, director.

"It's the sort of thing you wouldn't see in the Kaimin," Stuart said. "It's news that has to get out, but may or may not be interesting—such as the printing of a campus map, or the Fall Quarter Calendar; that sort of thing."

Situated on the third floor of Main Hall, the Information Services is the official information office for the University, responsible for dispensing information to the off-campus public through its own publications, press releases, brochures and announcements.

"We're paid to support the image of the University, that's our job—who else is going to do it? But it's not done at the expense of the truth. We try to get a representative picture of what's happening on campus. I think anybody who reads our news service publications will agree we cover both sides of a story, but it'll be done objectively. It isn't as though we're at odds with the Kaimin, though it might appear so at times. We simply have a different job to perform."

Stuart said the service is responsible for funding 12 regular publications, not including news releases, and over one hundred departmental publications yearly.

"The work we do for the different departments they pay for, but we do the editing, art work, layout, coordination or anything else they need assistance with. It might be a brochure requested by the Psychology Department that will be sent to the high schools. That's our job—the dissemination of information."

Stuart listed UM Profiles, The Establishment, Newsletter, UM Facts, quarter calendars, campus maps, The Faculty and Staff Handbook and the Total Information Packet as publications the service is responsible for.

Stuart called the 35,000-circulation bimonthly Profiles newsletter a "low cost paper" sent to parents, alumni, city council members and legislators.

"It gives them information of what's happening on campus they probably couldn't get elsewhere," he said.

"Like most of the departments on campus," Stuart said "we were asked to cut our budget 10 per cent. That meant instead of 35,000 Profiles going out every month, we sent out the same number every other month and instead of putting out The Establishment every day, we do it three times a week now."

"Our total budget this year is $87,643 compared to $92,536 last year."

"Funding being what it is, our present operating budget is only $5,200 more than our 1964-65 budget, from $26,000 to $31,200. We also reduced our budget for part-time help from $8,000 to $7,000."

In 1964-65 the service employed six full-time people, while presently three full-time people are employed. However, Stuart said, 12 to 20 work-study and part-time people are employed, depending on the work-load, and work a total of 120 hours a week.

"We've been called biased on occasion," Stuart said, "but I don't believe we are. We've tried to balance our views. We're not controlling our people writing the news. Most of them are journalism majors and some are working on the Montana Kaimin."

Service publications are utilized by Missoula radio and television stations as well as other Montana outlets.

George Scott of KGVO News said, "The Information Services is concerned with boosting the image of the University, but I don't believe their news releases are biased. Most of the information they send us could be classified as 'campus news' and not of a general interest off-campus, but we do use probably 10 to 20 per cent of what they send us."

Jim Goodrich, KYSS Radio news director, said, "I read both the Kaimin and Profiles. The Kaimin expresses an extreme point of view and is understandably prejudiced for the student, and that's their job. Those who call the service releases, or their Profiles, 'biased' are reading their own views into it. It would be hard to say either the Kaimin or the service publications are slanted. They're simply taking two different approaches and covering differing points of view."

Paul Freeman, Montana Associated Press bureau chief, said "I don't believe the UM Information Services is any more biased than any other public relations organization. It isn't their job to attack the University. That's the Kaimin's job and they do it. I don't believe we get enough sport news from the service and when we do it's all bunched up. We don't get a continual flow. Considering how much time Hal Mathew has to get all UM sports information together, I guess he does a good job, but as it is now Montana State gives more information and on a more regular basis."

Gordon Lemon, a junior in journalism and part-time service employee, said, "I don't think we're restricted in any way in what we run. I believe we're given infinite freedom."

Mike Pane, senior in journalism and another part-time employee, said, "We're only restricted in what we write in that we're given assignments and we have an editor over us to edit our copy."

Chris Coburn, senior in journalism and part-time employee, said, "I don't believe the service accomplishes the job for the amount of money spent. I don't think we're biased, but I think we spend for too much time on things like putting together the honor roll at the sake of more important business. I think we're wasting too much time."

'Black Week' scheduled

Black Week, designed to present the broad scope of "blackness" to the campus and community, has been scheduled for May 13 through 21.

"We hope to get more students involved this year so that they are more aware of black people," Cathy Hobbs, Black Week chairman, said. "We hope to present the political, musical, poetic, educational and economic sides of blackness."

"Black is Black," a 13-member band which plays both African and soul music, will appear with an African dance group May 13 to open the week.

Warren Widener, the first black mayor of Berkeley, will speak May 15 at 7 p.m. in the University Center Ballroom.

Two movies, concerning phases of blackness, will be shown May 16, and a "soul food dinner" will be served in the Gold Oak Room on May 17.

Joseph Washington, director of Afro-American Studies at the University of Virginia, will speak about blackness May 17.

On May 18, Malcolm X's birthday, a short movie about his life and ideas will be shown. Sonia Sanchez, a black poet and a professor at New York University, will discuss her poetry and the black experience after the film.

A "disk jockey set," a dance backed with records, will feature soul and popular music at Christ the King Parish from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. on May 20.

Lewis Smith, chairman of Operation Bootstrap, an all-black economic organization providing industrial and educational services to blacks, will discuss the black economy May 20.

A black church service in the UC Ballroom with gospel music and "black preaching" will conclude Black Week activities May 21.

"This type of church service is something a lot of black students miss up here because they've been so far away from the religious services they're used to," Hobbs said. "We would like to show the Missoula community and students the type of spiritual needs we as black students need."

"I would like to stress that Black Week isn't just inclusive of black university students, but it will also include black families here in Missoula and other areas of the state."

Black Week is funded by a $5,000 Central Board allocation granted last spring.

Community-service credits offered by social welfare

The social welfare department is offering students a chance to become involved in social service in the Missoula community, according to Steve Hotho, assistant social welfare sociology and professor.

The social welfare department is offering six hours of credit to be taken two hours each quarter through the Community Welfare Office. Hotho is the program director.

Volunteers for the program need not be social welfare majors, Hotho said. Enrollment will be limited to 35, and Hotho said he expects to have 20 to 25 openings Spring Quarter.

He said he is looking for "all kinds of skills" — counseling, sports and recreation, arts, drama, music and office skills.

Volunteers would work as aides under the direction of a supervisor, according to where they work and what their particular abilities are, Hotho said.

As an example, an elementary education major might assist in the supervision and care of children of preschool age at the Day Care Center.

The only requirement for volunteers is they must keep a weekly log to be submitted to Hotho at the end of the quarter. This, plus an evaluation by the student's supervisor, comprises the student's grade.

"There is a trend in higher education to emphasize the application of theory to social problems because this seems to be a valid method of learning," Hotho said.

Speech-debate tournament slated

The Indian studies department and the Kyi-Yo Indian Club will sponsor a high school speech and debate tournament at the University of Montana April 10 and 11.

Twenty Montana high schools with a high Indian enrollment have been invited to send participants.

The topic for the debate is, "Resolved: That tribal councils adequately represent the goals and aspirations of Indian people." Other events include extemporaneous, declamation and after-dinner speaking.

1. The last six days of the final week of each quarter will be scheduled in two hour segments, one for each course. The two hour segments should be considered as class meetings, to be treated by the instructor as he thinks educationally appropriate.

2. The final (6 day) week is not, therefore, a final examination week, but a week of class meetings. Instructors are expected to meet their assignments to fulfill the remaining requirements of the course, help to meet the educational needs of their students or otherwise conduct their class meetings in that last week of the quarter in ways that serve the best academic interests of their students.

Gray proposes counseling program

Harold Gray, acting director of the Indian Studies department, has proposed a Special Services Project for counseling "disadvantaged" students be established at the University of Montana.

The proposal, approved by the UM Administration, has been sent to the U.S. Office of Education in Washington, D.C., for final approval and funding, according to Gray.

The proposal calls for hiring three counselors to work with the Upward Bound staff to coordinate and continue Upward Bound programs throughout the school year. Upward Bound presently is a summer instructional program which prepares disadvantaged students for college.

The counselors would provide academic, personal, vocational and financial counseling, and would organize a group of volunteer tutors for students enrolled in the program. They also would serve as job placement personnel.

Gray said he proposed the program earlier this year because of increased needs of low-income, educationally deprived and disadvantaged students.

According to Gray, a student's past environment has a decided influence on his academic progress.
